Dyess 'Bats' support operations 40th AEG welcomes new faces during deployment swapouts

By Staff Sgt.
Kathleen Ferrero
40th Air Expeditionary Group
Public Affairs

The "Bats" have officially arrived.

The 9th Bomb Squadron flew to their deployed location from Dyess as the 34th Bomb Squadron's "Thunderbirds" redeployed to Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D.

Dyess sent approximately 450 personnel and 50 short tons of cargo to support the B-1's, said 2nd Lt. Christopher Young, Expeditionary Logistics Flight.

In addition to the Dyess group, about 200 support personnel will rotate in under AEF 7/8, Lieutenant Young said.

The 40th Air Expeditionary Group commander from Dyess, Col. Jeffrey Beene, said the new team is proud to work with AEF support personnel from more than 30 different bases to defeat terrorism.

Staff Sgt. Jocelyn Rich

A B-1 sits on the flightline at a forward operating location. Dyess B-1s recently deployed as the Forward Operating Location bomber presence in U.S. Central Command.

When they arrived, several of the deployers expressed their excitement at putting their training to use.

"It was definitely interesting to see how all the process works," Capt. Brandon Miller, 9th EBS scheduler and copilot. "Just being part of this was a good feeling."

As the forward operating location bomber presence in CENTCOM, the 34th BS's "Thunderbirds" flew a variety of missions in support of both Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Historically, the Bats supported the global war on terror during Operation Anaconda and provided a presence in the Pacific Theater of Operations during the early stages of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

AMC command chief visits Dyess

By Senior Airman
Matthew Rosine
Dyess Public Affairs

The Air Mobility Command's command chief master sergeant visits Dyess Wednesday through March 26.

Chief Master Sgt. Michael Kerver is also the command chief master sergeant of United States Transportation Command. As a dual-hatted command chief, he advises the commander and his staffs on matters of health, welfare and morale, and effective utilization of more than 115,000 total force enlisted personnel assigned to the commands.

"It's exciting to have a real (person), the status of our command's chief enlisted leader, walking among our warriors, shaking hands, because he mirrors all that the command is," said Chief Master Sgt. Kenneth Angell, 317th Airlift Group superintendent. "The chief will be someone 'real' to those guys turning the wrenches and washing airplanes... -- to put some "skin on" AMC (Headquarters) is always exciting."

Along with visiting his troops at the 317th AG, the Cleveland, Ohio-native will also meet with the Dyess Airman Leadership School class 04-C Thursday for an open forum and medallion ceremony. Chief Kerver will then speak at the class graduation that evening.

"We are looking forward to meeting with Chief Master Sgt. Kerver and getting some insight from him on Air Mobility Command operations and leadership perspectives," said Senior Master Sgt. Stephanie Powell, Dyess ALS director.

Among his years of service, Chief Kerver has earned a Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, an Air Force Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters and an Air Force Achievement Medal with one oak leaf cluster.

"Chief Kerver has provided sage advice and guidance to the command's top leader," Chief Angell said. "The AG airman knows that General Handy is the commander, but they may never see him or shake his hand. The chief represents the 4-star and he'll be the '4-star' to many of our young airmen. He will be real, not just a picture on the wall."

Fourteen master sergeants add stripe

By Senior Airman
Matthew Rosine
Dyess Public Affairs

Fourteen Dyess master sergeants tack on another stripe and join the ranks of senior master sergeant.

They are:

- James Albert, 7th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron
- Eric Anderson, 7th Maintenance Group
- Joseph Bible, 317th Maintenance Squadron
- Jackie Blankenship, 9th Air Support Operations Squadron
- Michael Butrovich, 7th Operations Support Squadron
- Richard French, 7th Equipment Maintenance Squadron
- William Givens, 317th Airlift Group
- Leroy Haynes, 317th AG

- Joel McPherson, 7th Munitions Squadron
 - Juan Muniz, 317th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron
 - Richard Peck, 7th Civil Engineer Squadron
 - Kenneth Smith, 7th Communications Squadron
 - Franklin Spear, 7th Component Maintenance Squadron
 - Michael Stephens, 317th AMXS
- According to the Air Force Personnel Center, the central evaluation board 04E8, which convened Jan. 26 through Feb. 12, considered 16,516 master sergeants. The board selected 1,566 master sergeants for promotion for a 9.48 percent selection rate. This is 3.48 percent above the minimum promotion-rate objective of six percent.

The average score for those selected was 671.72, with an average time in grade and time in service of 4.70 and 20.15 years, respectively. The average score was based on the following point averages:

- 134.98 for enlisted performance reports.
- 34.02 for time in grade.

- 21.17 for time in service.
 - 20.47 for decorations.
 - 69.13 for Air Force supervisory examination.
 - 391.95 for board score.
- Those selected will be promoted to senior master sergeant beginning in April.

Action Line

The Action Line provides a direct line of communication between Col. Jonathan George, 7th Bomb Wing commander, and the people of Dyess. As a general rule, people should use their chain of command or contact the agency involved first, however, if you are not satisfied, call 696-3355 or e-mail action@dyess.af.mil and leave your message. Leaving your name and phone number ensures you will receive a personal reply by phone. The Peacemaker staff reserves the right to edit all incoming Action Lines before publication. Not all Action Lines may be published.

Clinic concerns

Q I have a complaint about getting an appointment at the Dyess clinic. My daughters and I are military dependents and we were all recently sick. I tried to make an appointment five separate times for us to be seen and treated. We have never been able to make an appointment. We were told that the clinic's primary concern is the active-duty military members. We were then referred to the walk-in clinic and told to wait for 7 hours to be seen. Something needs to be done to ensure Dyess families are getting the medical care we are entitled to.

A Thank you for allowing the opportunity to address your concern.

Our goal at the 7th Medical Group is to meet or exceed TRICARE standards.

To that end, we do our best to see all of our enrolled population at the 7th MDG where we believe outstanding quality of care is routinely delivered.

However, given our finite number and limited specialty of staff and total resources, to ensure that we meet the healthcare needs of our patients and maintain standards of care, it is sometimes necessary to utilize healthcare facilities in the community.

To help remove the perception that we are not concerned about any cateogry of patients, our staff is being provided appropriate training to better meet their needs and express our desire to provide them with the best care possible.

Mentorship -- Pass it on

By Maj. Christopher Corley
7th Security Forces Squadron commander

While waiting on an assignment to enter active duty service in the Air Force, I had the privilege of working in industry for approximately seven months.

Although I didn't know it at the time, my job as a management trainee for a major manufacturing corporation proved to be perfect to prepare me for active-duty military service. I had a great time working there and I learned a lot about heavy machinery and manufacturing, but truthfully, I learned much more about how to deal with people.

The night before my first day of manufacturing work, I was called to the house of a childhood friend. My friend's father was a man named Larry, who had been an employee of the company for over 20 years. Larry invited me to come over and have dinner with him so we could talk about the company and what I needed to know before I went to work there. Larry became my first mentor in the work environment.

Larry's mentoring session didn't stop with dinner that night -- he went on to mentor me every day for the next seven months. He men-

“ We can never repay those who have mentored us in our past because we cannot calculate the value of what we were taught. But, we can pass on what we know to the next person, and in so doing continue the invaluable tradition of mentoring. ”

Maj. Christopher Corley
7th Security Forces Squadron commander

tored me during breaks, at lunch, before and after work -- anytime he had available to teach me something.

Larry believed that it was his responsibility to take me under his wing and show me the ropes. He taught me about many things -- how to do my job, how the manufacturing process worked, where key pieces of equipment were located throughout the plant, who was a good source of information and who was not, and who to hang out with and who to stay away from. The most valuable piece of information that Larry taught me was how to interact successfully with the different employees of the company.

Most of the men I worked with had over 20 years of experience in manufacturing. The vast majority of them were tough “blue collar” workers used to working on heavy machinery. Many of them had served their country in the military at some point in their adult lives. Some of them mentored me about life in the service and about what it was like to go to war.

These men were and still are some of the smartest folks I know. Somehow, probably because of Larry's careful instruction, I managed to win their friendship and respect.

I never realized the importance of Larry and the other men's mentoring until my first duty assignment where I had a chance to apply many of the skills I learned about working with other people. I also didn't realize the significance of what they had taught me.

They taught me not only what I needed to know to be successful at my job, but also what I needed to know to be successful in life.

We live in a unique environment in the military. The nature of our service requires us to switch jobs frequently -- each time when we PCS and sometimes in-between. Just like my friends in industry, because we have walked the ground before, we have a responsibility to mentor those newer to the organization than us.

We need to show them the ropes and take them under our wings, to teach them what they need to know to be successful both on the job and in life.

We can never repay those who have mentored us in our past because we cannot calculate the value of what we were taught. But, we can pass on what we know to the next person, and in so doing continue the invaluable tradition of mentoring.

Leadership is a contract

“Each one of us is given a piece of the action. Like the parts of a car, every part is important. The engine is no more important than the windshield wipers on a rainy day. ”

Lt. Col. Victor Rodriguez
7th Munitions Squadron commander

By Lt. Col. Victor Rodriguez
7th Munitions Squadron commander

Empowerment and accountability are components of stewardship and form a “contract” between teammates. All of us are teammates. Teammates are stewards and role models in the areas of their charge.

A teammate is given responsibility for a piece of the action. This piece could be his or her regular job, an additional duty or a special duty. The teammate is given all the moral support, authority and where-withall available to succeed in that endeavor (empowerment). They make that piece of the action his or hers, and takes ownership for every facet of that job. They lead action and capture the synergy of other teammates to ensure that the area is up to standard. If the endeavor goes well, he or she selflessly gives the credit to their team. If the endeavor goes south, he or she takes responsibility for it (accountability).

Each one of us is given a small or large piece of the action. Like the parts of a car, every part is important. The engine is no more important than the windshield wipers on a rainy day. Like the parts of a car, all of us must be ready with our areas so the team is ready when needed -- the team is counting on us. We are empowered and accountable for the results of our team.

As good stewards, we must produce sterling results; we must tweak our areas to their maximum. Good stewards exceed standards.

If the Air Force Instruction is unclear whether three or four “push-ups” are required, then do seven. I call this the “3 + 4 is 7 rule.” Try this on the inspector general. Maybe the IG is expecting to issue “a write-up” because at most bases they’ve seen people get hung up on the AFI and only do three “push-ups.” When the IG shows up, you show them that you do seven with a smile and a winning, positive attitude to boot. Case closed -- you and your team are the “Heat.”

Good stewards welcome empowerment and produce the best results possible in areas under their charge. At the hour of accountability, if successful, they relish giving the credit to their teammates; if not successful, they take responsibility.

Furthermore, they take great satisfaction in a job well done and a responsibility well discharged.

The 7th Munitions Squadron will hold its Combat Ammunitions Course Thursday.

The Dyess COMAC is the base's own version of the Air Combat Ammunitions Course at Beale Air Force Base, Calif. The AFCOMAC is the Air Force's premier training school for ammo troops on contingency operations for all fighter and bomber aircraft.

Dyess' COMAC course, originally suggested by Col. Robert Dickmeyer, 7th Maintenance Group commander, is designed to educate any and all people in the process of receiving, storing, maintaining and assembling munitions for Dyess aircraft.

Dyess COMAC is a one-day course. The first half deals with the process for requesting and receiving munitions allocations. It highlights the differences between training and War Reserve Material assets and covers the logistics of transporting munitions.

The course concludes with a hands-on build-up of both the MK-82 and the Joint Direct Attack Munition. Steel-toed boots are required for this section, but the class offers alternatives for those who may not have them.

Upon completion of this course, students will leave with their own weapons guide, an Air Force Form 2407, weekly and daily flying schedule coordination guide and certification as honorary ammo troop.

For more information about Dyess' COMAC, call 696-3704 or 696-2934.

CE scores environmental quality award

By 1st Lt. Jennifer Donovan
Dyess Public Affairs

Members of the 7th Civil Engineer Squadron accepted the General Thomas D. White Environmental Quality Award at the 2004 Environmental Training

Symposium March 10. Brig. Gen. Patrick Burns, Air Combat Command Civil Engineer, presented the award that represents Dyess as having one of the best environmental programs in ACC. “This award represents not only a commitment to enabling our mission, but also clear excellence in how Dyess goes about it,” said General Burns. The Environmental Quality Award is another one of many awards that 7th CE has received recently that includes the White House Closing the Circle Award. “This is another feather in the cap of Dyess,” said Lt. Col. Darren Daniels, 7th CE commander. “It shows that we have good environmental stewardship across the board.”

Portal transforming, improving way people work -- registration mandatory

“Because Information Is Not Enough” are the watchwords for the Air Force Portal, a state-of-the-art, Web-based source for all Air Force people. According to an Air Force Chief of Staff directive, all Air Force military personnel are required to register for an AF Portal account. The Air Combat Command commander has directed that all ACC airmen be registered on Air Force Portal by April 1. The portal provides a single point of access to the right information, at the right time, in the right format from any location.

Portal users can:

- ◆ Personalize the display and delivery of portal information;
- ◆ Take favorite Web site links with them when they travel; and
- ◆ Readily access the best of Air Force content, tools and applications, all organized in a user-friendly format.

The portal also allows access to integrated content from desktops and new features so users will not have to remember a laundry list of user names and passwords when they use multiple Air Force sites.

One popular tool that will continue to be universally available -- the Air Force White Pages -- allows users to look up contact information on Air Force people. When accessing information at different commands and bases, the same information from each facility will be in the same place with the same name. To date, more than 50 percent of ACC airmen have registered, however Dyess’ current registration is 25 percent. To access the Air Force Portal, go to <https://www.my.af.mil>. (Air Force Print News)

Lawn work
The base grounds contractor will be applying fertilizer to all base housing lawns from Monday through April 2. Access to back yards is required. Housing residents are asked to pick up any obstacles that would prevent fertilizer application. Residents are also asked to water their grass thoroughly after the fertilizer is applied. If you have pets, would like to schedule an appointment or for more information, call Staff Sgt. Solomon Vincent at 696-5629.

DMO capabilities crucial to combat training

By Airman James Kang
Dyess Public Affairs

After passing over rigorous rocky terrains, a B-1 bomber crew unloads its explosive arsenal with deadly precision.

With another target destroyed, the B-1 crew cruises through the rest of their virtual combat simulation.

While this futuristic training seems distant for the B-1 at the Mission Training Center this reality is close at hand.

Currently MTC's exist for some F-15 and F-16 bases along with the Airborne Warning and Control System at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Alaska and Tinker Air Force Base, Oklahoma. The Air Force is planning to further expand DMO capabilities by including the Predator unmanned aerial vehicle, the B-1, B-2 and B-52 bombers, the A-10 and the F/A-22 as well as F-35 Joint Strike Fighter, said Lt. Col. Davis Wallethe, the chief of DMO. Colonel Wallethe was previously the 7th Bomb Wing chief of safety.

According to Colonel Wallethe, Dyess is in the process of establishing its own MTC for the time being.

As a combat tool, many pilots agree that the training is well worth it.

"I was downtown at the start of tonight's activities -- the launch of the first High-speed Antiradiation Missile of Operation Iraqi Freedom. The location of my flight and the tactics employed were exactly like we were practicing in the F-16 Mission Training Center before we left -- talk about mission rehearsal," said one Air National Guard F-16 pilot.

DMO, previously known as Distributed Mission Training, is an Air Force readiness initiative to develop a fully integrated system that provides mission rehearsal training system, Colonel Wallethe said. The system will provide individual training, team training and a mission rehearsal training system to achieve and maintain individual, team and composite force skills for its combat and combat support forces.

"The primary focus of the DMO is to allow servicemembers to train as they would expect to fight," Colonel Wallethe said. "Also, the focus is on teaching the pilots individual and team tasks. These tasks include tactical training and procedure training such as navigation and responding to emergencies."

The DMO home page states that DMO trains aircrews in a realistic, fully integrated environment, capable of supporting the entire spectrum of training from individual up to campaign-level missions training. It utilizes full motion simulators, also known as Weapon System Trainers, to train individuals.

"DMO will provide dynamic, capabilities-based training that will achieve increased warfighter readiness at all levels," the colonel said.

Aircrews will be able to train with other weapon systems using existing WSTs.

Dyess is modernizing their plans for their WST in order to adapt to the evolving DMO.

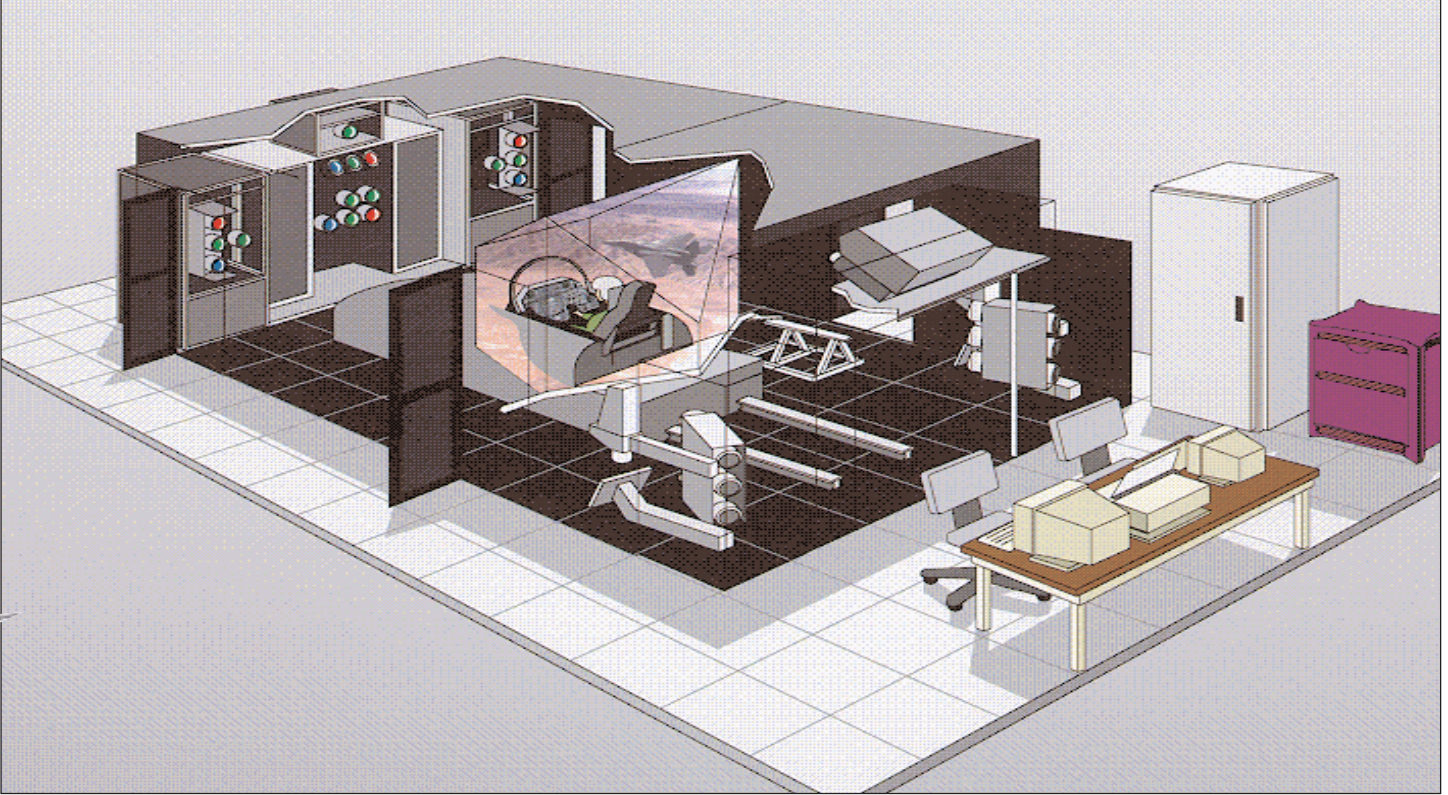

"Once all our upgrades are accomplished, we will be ready to establish our MTC and move forward," Colonel Wallethe said.

Although funding for DMO has been a roadblock in the past, it has received strong support from top Air Force officials and has pushed for additional funds, Colonel Wallethe said.

"The skills of our airmen are wearing out because they are not training to their most demanding wartime mission. In DMO we will be able to use simulators for big package rehearsals," said Gen. Hal Hornburg, Air Combat Control commander.

Plans are also in the works to upgrade all existing MTC facilities, adding additional ones and upgrade simulation technology in order to adapt to the changing nature of Air Force operational concepts and aircraft capabilities, Colonel Wallethe said.

"Successful combat missions are largely attributed to the type of training Distributed Mission Operations provides to servicemembers," Colonel Wallethe.

Left: Currently, Distributed Mission Operation capabilities include F-15, F-16 and Airborne Warning and Control System trainers. Plans are also in the works to include the Predator unmanned aerial vehicle, the B-1, B-2 and B-52 bombers, the A-10, the F/A-22 and the F-35 Joint Strike Fighter.

Above: A graphic of an F-15 Simulator shows the different components of the system. Training may vary from two to five hours per session. The F-15 Mission Training Centers became operational at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida in May 1999 and Langley Air Force Base Virginia in July 1999.

Robert “Poochie” Earl (#52) from 317th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron drives for a score, as William Gilliam, 7th Civil Engineer Squadron, attempts to block his path.

7 CES scores nail-biter victory over 317 AMXS

By Airman James Kang
Dyess Public Affairs

Donny Kellogg scored 27 points, including three 3-pointers, to lead the 7th Civil Engineer Squadron in a nail-biting victory, 66-65, over the 317th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron in intramural basketball March 11.

Despite playing with only four players, the 317th AMXS was in contention throughout the game, thanks to the scoring frenzy of Robert Earl, who racked up a whopping 52 points.

Draining a long-range three-pointer, Earl gave the Maintainer’s a 22-20 lead, with 8 minutes 25 seconds remaining in the first.

Kellogg answered back with a three of his own, giving the Engineers a slim lead. Battling for control at the half, both Kellogg and Earl continued their shooting success from the distance, nailing back to back three-pointers.

With just seconds remaining, Earl picked off a pass and streaked down the court for a lay-up. The 317th AMXS looked poised to go into the second half with the lead, until William Gilliam, launched a “Hail-Mary” from half court at the buzzer, to halt the 317th AMXS’ momentum and give 7th CES a one point 34-33 lead, ending the first.

The 317th AMXS, though fatigued, came out of the gates strong in the second half, displaying an aggressive offensive performance. Combined with teammate Roberto Ramirez, Earl once again led the pack with an 8-0 scoring drive.

Earl further stretched the lead to 47-39, after he connected his sixth three-pointer of the night and battled past defenders for a difficult lay-up on the following possession.

However, the 7th CES one-man advantage was starting to take full effect. Dominating the boards, the Engineers’ rebounds were quickly converted into points, overtaking the Maintainers lead. Down the stretch, Kellogg was able to lead his team with 12 second-half points, taking the lead after an open lay-up with 1 minute 30 seconds remaining, making the score 64-62.

As the final seconds melted off the clock, it seemed that the 317th AMXS would runaway with the victory when Earl picked off an inbound pass and converted it into a three-point play, when he was fouled on a lay-up, giving them a one point lead.

But Gilliam, with a few faithful seconds remaining, spoiled the 317th AMXS’ celebration, when he scrambled for a long inbound pass and drove in the game-winning lay-up at the buzzer.

“Playing with only four players, we felt we played hard and had a good performance,” said Earl. “But being short one man really hurt us in the end, especially in rebounding.”

Roberto Ramirez from 317 AMXS drives in for a layup as William Gilliam tries to block the shot.
